Labor says that the new council tax is a trap by John Harry

Article published on February 4th 2012 | Loans

The annual budget plan that has come up sets your council tax would be a little tough as far as fixing over the coming next few years are concerned. The government is in the mood to increase freeze for one more year and they are also providing cash incentives to the town halls. May be you are going to find it a little difficult welcoming the councils which are expected to be hard-pressed. The coalition government that is being headed by the Conservative is facing criticism regarding the leading charges. The extra money has been rejected the Nottingham City Counsel that is being run by the Labour party

Councilor Graham Chapman Deputy leader of the Nottingham City has to say that in case they take up this money, the cost for it which the party people as well as the permanent residents of the Nottingham would prove to be too costly in the near future. He makes its comparison with a payday loans and says that taking up this money taking up a payday loan and paying almost around 40 percent rate of interest every year. He does not stop him self calling a tarp.

The council tax at Nottingham's would be rising by 3.4 percent. The people Labor are of the view that giving a sanction to this freeze would clearly mean that they government is going to get less of funds in the next year that is going to come. Councilor Chapman further adds that the huge bills for council tax benefit payment which the low income household have to incur is not take into account in this case. He says that if they are going to make an increase in the council tax, then they are going a whole lot of money that would be falling between 8000,000 pounds to 1 million pounds in a year. All this going to have an effect on providing quality services those are important.
