Buying a home Vs Renting a property by Glyn Jones

Article published on December 30th 2011 | Real Estate

Renting home is a normal fact so life. Some individuals are not able to buy a home so they rent it. The natural assumption is renting a property is much cheaper as compared to buying a home over a long period of time. Since many of us can't afford the hefty down payment to be made many of us just prefer getting property on

Finding a property or flats to rent in Battersea depends on seasonal as well as year round property. You need to consider all the costs involved in the renting of an apartment. The cost of rent is generally determined by value of location at that moment. Most of the landlords require you to make some security deposit say advance of three to four months before moving in.

The problem with property renting is as you will never get what you have put into the property and secondly there are few restrictions imposed on you that you are to follow either you want it not. However to a short term solution so save so much that you would have otherwise withdrawn or even got under debt to pay. Arranging finance and paying it back isn't anyway easy.

The cost of buying home is not cheap and we all know that very well. The cost may vary depending on the location that you choose. Its not just the cost of property that you are to pay in lieu to houses for sale Brixton. Besides that they are legal formalities and land dues to be paid along with several kind of taxes. But the reward of owning your home is above all that. And besides that for buying home its usually a one time payment or confined to a small period of time.

While for lettings the whole maintenance cost is born by the landlord while partially it is taken in the form of rent. Buying a home opens up the doors of customization for you. Since you have the full scale freedom to choose the type of architectural style, the space requirements and besides that the amenities that you prefer. While in case of rentals, the opposite applies. You just go for the cheapest deals with the basic amenities provided. But of course its not the best choice that you may consider.

Besides that owning a home also brings long term personal and financial security. Your own home means full security and you have the complete authority to manage it the way you like. You have your privacy and freedom to live the way you like. The only thing matters is choosing the right kind of service and having the property that is certainly right for you. Talking to people or letting agents Brixton can be helpful in choosing the right property for your needs. Real estates is a flourishing business and you certainly can gain the services by some very experienced and expert estate agents.
