Show Your Appreciation for the People Who Built Your Nashville Home by Colby Moore

Article published on May 5th 2012 | Real Estate

When youâ€™re building your dream home, you might have forgotten that none of it would have happened without your home builder. Home builders make your dreams come true and it is only apt to show them some appreciation. If you think that a simple â€œThank Youâ€ and a handshake arenâ€™t enough, you might want to think about giving a gift to your home builder.

A home builder is responsible for making the plans for your dream home that you might have scribbled on some napkin a reality. These people work with financiers, real estate agents, and you, to make sure that the home being built is practically perfect in every way. This is why it is only right to show your appreciation to by giving them a gift.

One easy and cheap gift idea would be a photo scrapbook. Document the entire building process by snapping pictures of the whole thing, but donâ€™t let the builder know what youâ€™re planning. Make a scrapbook using the photos and include captions and maybe even a letter of gratitude to the builder. They will appreciate something that chronicles the work they have done.

If the builders did a really good job on your home, you can even surprise them with a lunch at their next project. A quick phone call to the builderâ€™s office can tell you where they are working next and you can have pizzas delivered there. You can even go all the way and prepare a buffet lunch for the crew.

If you think the photo scrapbook idea was pretty cheesy, you can ramp it up with a video presentation of the building process. Video record the whole thing from ground-breaking to installation of the last finishes and edit it all together. You can even add messages from your family at the end to show your appreciation for this home builder Nashville has.

Nashville home builders might be great at making dreams come true, but not all of them are web-savvy. If you know your way around websites, you can help the builders update and redesign their website. If not, you can always hire a professional web developer to help the builders out.

Donâ€™t be like most people that forget about Nashville home builders after their house is done. Wouldnâ€™t you want to be thanked for a job well done too?
