What to consider when choosing summer swim camps for children by Sharen

Article published on January 2nd 2012 | Recreation

Choosing to send the child to one of the many different summer swim camps is a very important decision. There are many different costs that need to be considered and you should always take into account the quality that the camp offers. In addition, it is important that you think about the specific concerns that the club coach might have before registering. In the event that your child is training for competitions and the summer swim camps do not train the students hard, it might be better to avoid them as the child will get out of shape.

One thing that some parents forget is the element of fun. Summer swim camps should be fun and in most cases the swimmers are children. Younger children will easily make new friends and you have to make sure that the staff will be friendly. After all, you are sending your child on a summer camp. It does not matter if it is meant for swimmers as what is really important is that he can also relax and have a really good time. Fun memories should always remain after going to the swim camp.

Every parent should analyze what the selected summer swim camps are offering. Look at what is offered when thinking about the work that is done. For instance, if you are looking for stroke improvement, you will want to visit a camp that offers that. Maybe you want the stroke work to be balanced with regular training. You might want to talk to families that sent their child to considered summer swim camps. Was the experience a good one and did the child gain benefits from going there? These are the two most important questions that you have to ask the parents.

It is really important that you talk to the summer swim camps staff that is employed. You can interview them over email or phone if you cannot go there directly. You are interested in the philosophy that the staff has and whether or not they are easily going to answer all the concerns and questions that you currently have. It is also really important that you learn who is going to be the swimming coach. His/her experience can be checked online. Make sure that the choice is suitable for the skill level that the child has. You should also talk to your personal club coach in order to see if he has some summer swim camps that are recommended. His experience is usually higher so he will know what to recommend.

The bottom line is that you can easily find many different summer swim camps for children but your choice has to be based on the factors that were mentioned above. Some parents do the mistake of thinking about prices first but you should mainly analyze quality and the experience that the child will have there. Look for summer swim camps that are suitable and that are going to help your child have fun and also learn as much as possible while improving swimming technique.
