The riders of the latest craze to hit the waters can take their SUP boards just about anywhere there is water. Just about anyone can use one of the Stand Up Paddle boards found among the wide range in our online SUP collection.

The stand up paddle board is famous for its high speed and easy handling. Usually they come with various graphics from different brands. There is a standard recommendation while buying stand up surfing boards. The SUP boards have three different sizesâ€” 8â€™TM2, 9â€™TM2, and 10â€™TM2 in length. Based on surfing experience each length has another three categories to choose from. They are termed as Novice, Intermediate and Advanced. A weight range is suggested for each category.

The stand up paddle boards are surf boards where the surfer stands up instead of laying down on the board. A rider uses a long paddle to propel him or herself through the water.

The Stand Up Paddle boards are now classified as vessels by the US Coast Guard as of October 3, 2008. Therefore, the rider of the Stand Up Paddle board is now required to wear a floatation device as a part of the safety protocol while paddling. The board can be used in the ocean or on fresh water like lakes and calm streams and rivers. The amount of people taking up the sport is considerable because they donâ€™t have to just be used in the surf.

The Stand Up Paddle board is showing up on lakes in Montana and rivers in Oregon. They are great for exploring waters that are hard to launch a boat or too small for boats.
