There are few moments in life more exciting or more beautiful than that moment when two people decide to spend the rest their lives together. And when you design your own engagement rings as a keepsake token of that special moment, you're creating a memory that will last a lifetime.

Designing your own engagement rings is a whole lot easier than you might initially think. In today's world, many people are looking for more creative ways to express their love and devotion to another and, even though an engagement ring is certainly a very traditional token of this intent, when you design it yourself it adds a certain sentimental twist to the gesture. Not only that, but designing your own engagement ring is a good way to ensure uniqueness, as well as a good fit with her personal style. Now, you might be thinking, but I'm not a jeweler! I can't design custom jewelry! But here's good news! you don't have to have a high level of expertise or even fashion sense to design great diamond rings. You simply have to be able to choose and put together the elements you like from a selection of loose diamonds and ring settings. Here's how the process of designing your own engagement rings works:

Step 1: Choose a Diamond

You will be presented with an array of loose diamonds from which to choose for your solitaire. Loose diamonds come in all shapes and sizes, and your search will be made infinitely easier if you take a moment to filter your diamond criteria by cut, carat, color and clarity. If you like, you can also filter your diamond search results by price, ensuring that you are only seeing the loose diamonds that fit into your specified budget.

Step 2: Choose a Setting

You've found the perfect diamond solitaire. Now, it's time to choose a setting. Yellow gold, white gold and platinum are typical metal choices for the settings on diamond rings. Beyond that, a four- or six-prong arrangement will be recommended for securing the stone itself. And just like that, you're almost done. Almost!

Step 3: Making it Your Own with Diamond Accents

That's all it takes to put together beautiful diamond rings, but if you really want to dazzle her with a unique and distinctive piece of jewelry of your own design, then you need to take the process just one step further. Diamond accents add that extra touch of class and style that set custom engagement rings apart from the crowd; a token of your love that she'll look upon fondly every day from this moment on.

It's easy to design your own engagement rings and, when you see the look of joy and amazement on her face, you'll know "without a doubt" that it was worth the extra effort involved in designing your ring yourself.
