Tips to Choose Best Swimsuit for Tall Women by Naida Thomas

Article published on June 24th 2012 | Shopping

With pace of time women swimsuit styles have changed. In earlier days, in Victorian time women were wearing heavy wool swim dresses that almost covered the entire body but in recent era women swimsuit styles leave very little to the imagination. There are different styles, shapes and fabrics available in the market so you can choose the best one for you according to your requirements and budget.

Prefer Two Piece Suits

On research I have found advises from the eminent women who are working in swim team, in aquatic environment as life guard, pool manager, or swim lesson instructors. According to them it is uncomfortable for tall women to wear one piece women swimsuit all the time and the best option for them is two piece women swimsuits that give them a comfort and relaxation in body movement. Two piece women swimsuit allows you to mix and match the bottom and the top for a perfect, full-body fit.

Match the Suits with Purpose

If you more indulge with sports and involves in activities like body boarding, swimming laps and playing sand volleyball choose the women swimsuit that will stay put for all activities. A sport-style suit with wider straps and strong bust support is probably your best option. If you are indulge in aquatic activity which tends to be more stationary, a string bikini will probably work just fine.

Show Your Best Assets

You can use your women swimsuit to draw attention to your best assets and minimizing the trouble zones. If you're proud of your strong arms and your nice chest, choose a halter-top in a bright color or pattern that lifts your breasts and calls attention up-top. You can minimize your bottom-half by choosing a standard full-coverage brief in a solid, dark color. On the other hand, if you want to show off your legs and butt choose higher-cut briefs with less coverage and opt for a bright or light color on bottom with a darker, simpler top.

Swimsuit shopping puts tall women in a bad mood. All well, you need to walk confidently when buying a swimsuit. There is nothing that draws attention more than a tall woman who feels confident in her own skin.
