Effective and reliable occupational health management is a must if current health and safety legislation is to be met.

Specialising in one of the best integrated occupational health management systems, EOA Systems are a company who pride themselves on their ability to provide an effective and professional way of ensuring that all health and safety standards are met, also working to reduce the effort of data collation and minimizing effort.

The occupational health management systems includes an employee database, where individual records are kept, containing address, work location, and various contact details. Also storing pre-employment medicals, the Occupational Health Management allows for initial medical histories, such as allergies and alcohol consumption to be collated.

Keeping track of daily attendance and sickness absences, the occupational health management systems mean that information can be produced quickly and easily. And with occupational health reporting which can generate analysis reports, the occupational health management from EOA Systems is able to list employees who have been sick for a total of 10 days or more, list employees due for a lung function test, and can graph attendance by reason and accidents by affected body part.

For all their occupational health management systems, EAO also provide comprehensive support and training so as to ensure that their clients benefit from the full range of features now available to them, ensuring that they get the most out of their occupational health management.

In addition to their occupational health management system, EAO also have a range of other software solutions, helping improve standards across the UK. Comprehensive in its management, the health and safety system from EOA Systems includes modules for COSHH, dealing with risk assessment, accident reporting, audits and permit to work requirements.
