Things to consider when booking a Gatwick Bed and Breakfast by Mary Porter

Article published on June 24th 2012 | Travel

If you are flying from or to Gatwick bed and breakfast accommodation is ideal solution if your departure or arrival time is at an unsociable hour. Having somewhere to get your head down and take care of your culinary needs takes the stress out of travelling so it is no wonder the humble B&B is such a popular choice. There are however a few things which need to be taken into consideration when looking for a suitable Gatwick bed and breakfast.

Your first port of call should always be to check the proximity of the Gatwick bed and breakfast. Ideally it should be well within half an hour from the front door to the Gatwick car parks. A short distance between the Gatwick bed and breakfast and the airport is very important as this will give you the best possible chance of getting to the departure lounge with time to spare.

Of course an integral part of the Gatwick bed and breakfast experience is the food. Whether your preferred choice in the morning is a bowl of muesli or a full English fry up, the place you are staying should be very willing to accommodate you when it comes to the most important meal of the day.

Gatwick bed and breakfast rooms do not have to be the most state of the art but cleanliness is a must. It is nice to have a homely vibe when it comes to soft furnishings and other accoutrements. Some would argue that the most important thing when you stay at a Gatwick bed and breakfast is the attentiveness of the owner and the staff. A welcoming atmosphere makes a difference even for the shortest of stays so do not accept anywhere which appears to have rude or enthusiastic workers.

If you are flying from Gatwick bed and breakfast accommodation of the highest quality can be difficult to find. Arguably the best B&B in the area can be found at Linchens.co.uk. A luxurious place just minutes away from the Gatwick car parks, you can have a very enjoyable stay there without breaking the bank.
