Canadian Work Permit and Move to Canada by Francis

Article published on February 3rd 2012 | Travel Tips

Canadian work permit allow workers with an offer of employment from a Canadian employer to work in Canada. Certain foreign workers may be eligible for the permit in the absence of HRSDC confirmation of a job offer on the basis of demonstrated benefit to Canada as a result of their employment. The processing of a Canadian work permit depends on the sort of work you will do when you come to Canada.

These provisions are generally applicable in such cases as a foreign worker would create or maintain social, cultural or economic benefits or opportunities for Canadian citizens or permanent residents, is a religious or charitable nature and create or maintain reciprocal employment of Canadian citizens or permanent residents of Canada in other countries, be engaged in work that is designated by the minister as being work that can be performed by a foreign national on the basis of the following criteria:

Work related to a research, educational or program

Limited access to the Canadian Labour market is necessary for reasons of public policy related to the competitiveness of Canada's academic institutions or economy.

To be eligible for the permit you need a job offer from a Canadian employer, a completed application, written confirmation from human resources and skills development Canada that the employer can hire a foreign worker to fill the job and the employer is to get that written confirmation and in some cases you do not need a Labour market opinion. You must satisfy a visa officer that you will leave Canada at the end of your work permit, show that you have enough money to support yourself and your family while you are in Canada, respect the law and have no criminal record, show that you are not a risk to the security of Canada and be in good health.

Canada has always been a favorite destination for migrants around the world for both the lifestyle and opportunities it offers to new comers who move to Canada. You can move to Canada as a permanent resident and you will be afforded all the same rights as citizens of Canada with the exception of voting privileges.

You can move to Canada in different categories that some of them can lead to residency which includes: skilled worker class, business class, provincial nomination, family immigration class, Quebec selected immigration, student visa, temporary worker class and international adoption. Canada is a beautiful country and a place of choice for many people around the world when it comes to immigration.
