De Facto Visa and Work Permit Australia by Francis

Article published on February 8th 2012 | Travel Tips

De facto visa Australia allows a spouse of an Australian citizen or permanent resident to come to Australia. You and your sponsor must have been together in a de facto relationship for at least 12 months immediately before making the application. You need to be able to show that you and your partner have a mutual commitment to a shared life to the exclusion of all others and that the relationship is continuing. You will need to show that you have been living together for the entire 12 months immediately prior to lodging the applicant form. If there has been any period of separation during that 12 month period, then it must only be temporary.

You can still be in a de facto relationship even if you are still or were legally married to another person. In those circumstances you need to show that, you are legally divorced or permanently separated from that other person and you are in a genuine, continuing and exclusive relationship with your new spouse. When your lodged application is submitted the department of immigration and citizenship will take into consideration all of the evidence that establishes the genuineness of the relationship like sharing of important social and financial commitment for the application to be approved.

Work permit Australia is easy to obtain if you can demonstrate that you have skills and experience that is in demand in Australia. The requirements of permit depend upon the foreign individual's citizenship and your intended length stay in Australia. Work permit is issued for a period of 3 years by your employment sponsor. Your spouses and children under the age of 18 years can accompany you to Australia and they are allowed to study and work in Australia. You must have an employer who agrees to hire you subject to a work permit being approved and the employer applies for a permit for you.

If the permit is approved you will receive the document and upon arrival in Australia you may be required to register with the local police. With the employer nomination scheme information, you can determine if you are eligible for applying and getting sponsored for a work permit Australia under the employer nomination scheme. You can also get hold of a work permit under the regional sponsored migration scheme. This scheme has been developed for the employers who are in regional, scarcely populated or under developed areas in Australia. You can resort to this scheme if you are unable to find expert personnel from within the Australian labor market.
