Article published on August 24th 2012 | Vacations

Spain is one of the top tourist destinations in the world. It is frequently visited by tourists from the different corners of the world. If you are planning on going to Spain for a holiday then you should know when the perfect time to go is. Some tourists prefer to go when the tourist spots are not very crowded while others prefer to go during the peak tourist season so that they can experience the excitement.

If you visit Spain during the summer then there are lots of advantages such as the warm weather which makes it perfect for exploring the many beautiful beaches in the country. It is also the peak season for tourists during the summer so tour operators offer more tours. Some of the tours are only available during the summer so you get to explore more of the country. There are also some disadvantages if you go for a holiday during the summer such as the crowded tourists spots.

Summer can also get really hot in Spain so there are some areas where the temperatures can be very difficult to tolerate. You will feel very tired as you go from one tourist spot to another in the extremely hot weather although there are some tourists who would really enjoy the warm weather. If you are planning to visit Spain in the summer then you should plan a trip to Seville and Madrid because these cities are often deserted by the locals at this time of the year due to the very hot temperature. The locals often head to the cooler parts of the country along the coast to escape from the heat.

Another option that you can consider is to visit Spain during the winter. This part of the year is the off peak season for tourists in the country. You can expect to see that the tourist spots are less crowded. The weather is also a lot cooler so you can explore the country in comfort. You do not have to deal with the unbearably hot temperature that the country gets during the summer.

Planning your Spanish holiday is also a lot easier during the winter because it is easier to book hotels and tours even at the last minute. The rates are also a lot cheaper during the winter since it is the off peak season for tourists. If you are on a limited budget then you must definitely schedule your holiday during the winter months. There are also a few disadvantages of visiting Spain in the winter such as the bad weather that some parts of the country may experience particularly in the north.
