We all know that Apple is a very reputed company and one of its inventions the Iphone has touched the market in such a pattern that it has given mobile communication, industry and use a new and different dimension. However, another very common fact about Iphone is that it is not within the reach of ordinary and average people. Most people cannot afford it due to its high price. On the other hand with the invention of smart phones that mostly use Google Android things are much clear and easier for people.

Android is easy to handle, mostly all smart phones use android operating system and the support community of android phones is much stronger than Iphone. Hence Android app development is much easier than iphone app development. The tools are easily available, and people with a little information and knowledge about application development can easily choose to make and install their own application for Android.

Google provides SDK or software development kit for Android app development. This kit has developing tools, which are easy to understand and use. The tool is cheaper compared to iphone and can be used to launch your application publicly, in the android market. A developer can easily use his skills of permutation and combination with an existing application to make new application.

A huge collection of library support is also available for application development in Android, which is generally absent in iphone app development. Using android is more like using Linux. Therefore, if you have used Linux before developing an application by yourself for your smart phone will be much easier.

The market for mobiles phones are showing a positive trend due to the attraction that has been created by these multipurpose brainy phones. If you are looking for an app development, look for a professional company that wants to benefit and is willing for contributing to your growth also.
