if~ When creating a new website or redesigning an existing site, there are four critical rules which should be followed to make the site effective, functional, loved by search engines - and successful.

â€¢ Easy to Read

â€¢ Break up Your Content

â€¢ Color and Fonts

if~ Things to avoid with content color:

1. Avoid vibrant background colors like purple or yellow. Such back colors make text difficult to read.
2. Avoid using an image behind your text.
3. Avoid using bright text colors on bright backgrounds.

â€¢ Fonts Matter

â€¢ Standard Compliant Browser for Development

â€¢ Keywords in Content

Describing to the client the function of textual content centered Google outcomes and that having no 'readable text' on the webpage would control their exposure, they select style over outcomes. Why you may ask would an organization control their opportunities of being discovered on look for engines? Well the concern still uses up with us too, but as said before the 'customer always knows best' and the choice was completely theirs to create.
