Choices for Buying Red Wines Today by Brian Morris

Article published on January 16th 2012 | Wine

Whether you prefer red wines or white wines, there are many different options for you today. Buying wines that are sold in boxes in the past was thought to be getting only the cheapest, lowest quality red wines available. However, today through Prestige Selections you can purchase the same high quality wines that you would normally buy in a bottle packaged instead in a box.

The box of course is recyclable as typical cardboard. The packaging used for boxed red wines is recyclable also. You simply remove the plastic liner from the cardboard and recycle the liner wherever number seven plastic is accepted.

The packaging will keep the red wines just as fresh as the first day it was opened for up to one month also. This new packaging allows you to pay a lower price for your favorite red wines and get the same high quality drink that you expect. Some of the best known wines are available today in a box rather than a bottle.

Many people might like to enjoy a single glass of wine in the evening. When you purchase a bottle, you will uncork and replace the cork in the bottle each time you want to pour a glass. If you don't get the cork back in properly, you might find that the wine loses its quality in a very short period of time. With the boxed red wines, you have a cap that is easy to tighten, which will help to maintain the quality for up to four weeks.

Some of the benefits to buying red wines in boxes include that the packaging is not as fragile as the bottles. Cardboard is far less likely to break than glass obviously. In addition due to the lower cost associated with using cardboard that savings will be passed on to you, the consumer.

The choices for boxed red wines are quite extensive. This wine is packaged at its peak just as it would be bottled. Having wine in a bottle does not change the taste as it was placed there when it was at its best. It will not benefit any further from being in a bottle with a cork. In fact, it might lose quality over time once opened. If you are looking for a way to enjoy the premium wines that you favor at a lower price, you will want to consider trying one of the options available for boxed red wines today.
