- The Infinite XP glitch is all-dependent on your speech skill. If it is a dub past the 50-point mark, then you can convince Old Ben to hook you up with his services at the local bar. It is not half as simple as it sounds. If you pull it off, you get your XP bumped up by 61 points. What is even better, you can redo the same speech challenge repeatedly, and keep increasing your XP.

- It all comes down to playing your cards right when fall out: new Vegas cheats come into play. You can actually get a higher product value than what you paid for. How? Well, you need to make sure that the seller has two similar items, but of varying quality. If you go for the cheaper of the two, then you get better value for less.

- Fallout: New Vegas cheats are too many to put a finger on. The coolest one, thus far, is where you get to steal the 37 gold bars. You will need a few accessories to pull it off. Some blocks of plastic explosives and a detonator for that Hail Mary. Without this glitch, you cannot take all the gold with you, considering each weighs in at 35 pounds. When you enter the vault, take everything. Then deactivate the security system, switch on the P.C and only read "Vera", nothing else. When Elijah shows up on the screen, convince him to meet you in the vault. Leave the room and walk to the stairs on your far right. Wait till Elijah is really close to the door, then blow the plastic explosive, and leave the way you came in. When all this is over, you can skip to the ship, with all the gold bars, totaling close to 390,000 caps.

- To get a weapon repaired for free just sell it, if it's broken, to a vendor for 0 caps, and buy it back for the same amount. What you get back is a fully functional weapon, at no cost.
