How offices can benefit from secure document storage by Harry Ben

Article published on December 12th 2011 | Business

The advent of the internet coupled with a boost from the technology sector, have given rise to a paperless society where almost everything is done online. Children learn from computers and offices literally run on emails. People barely pick up their writing pens anymore; everything is digitized including banking, trading, and even art.

Despite living in a paperless world today, physical documents still hold their value. Their importance in a world fuelled by the internet is vital depending on what information they hold.

The internet removed a lot of paperwork and quickened up the process of filing documents both for the masses as well as for government purposes. But there is a huge risk circling organisations, in the form of hackers and viruses that are simply waiting for the right moment to get in and get what they want.

Physical documents are therefore used for more important things that need to be stored under lock and key to keep them away from prying eyes. The reason for this is that there is no password protecting them from being viewed by anyone; which is why they need to be stored safely.

Companies, businesses and corporations go to great lengths to keep documents that are vital to the firm in a safe place within the company. But another threat comes from in the form of people from one's own organisation leaking out important documents which simply cannot be prevented. This is where secure document storage comes into the picture.

The Box is a storage and relocation company in Abu Dhabi which provides secure document storage for all types of businesses at their facilities. Be it a small business or a large corporation, The Box makes provisions for all with the help of their modern facilities. All documents stored at The Box's facilities are scanned and then arranged in bar-coded containers for easy access when required. They even deliver documents on demand when needed by their clients; getting documents in and out of an organisation on a need-to-know basis. Apart from secure document storage, they also offer movers and packers services in Abu Dhabi; although both divisions run diversified operations for smoother functioning.
