The history of Wall Clocks is not new to man. Since the ancient times man has been successful in determining the time of the day by using different methods. The very first tool that was invented by man in order to determine time was referred to as Sundial. Depending upon the shadows casted by the sun on the particular market surfaces, time was determined by man. As the technology advanced over the years, there was also advancement in the Clocks. In today's time, there are basically two types of clocks which are available for the common man. The first one is referred to as the analog clock, which comprises of the simple minute hand, hour hand, seconds hand and is based on the simple principle which is followed by most of the Clocks. The other type of Wall Clock is the digital Wall Clock. In this, there aren't any hands available on the clock, but instead, it tells time in a digital format. The digital type of Wall Clock is relatively new to the world as compared to the analog version.

Further classification

The Wall Clocks may be further classified in the following sub categories. They are mentioned further. The first one is pendulum. The pendulum wall clock is the analog version of the clock. In this type of wall clock, there is a pendulum which is used to determine the end of each hour during the day. The second type of Wall Clock is Musical. In these types of Clocks, one hears a musical tune after completion of each hour. This type of clock is loved by the younger generations and is mostly used in children bedroom. The third type is referred to as the decorative wall clocks. These clocks are most popular clocks nowadays because of the simple fact that the designs of these clocks change according to the design and theme of one's room. Then the next type of Wall clocks is referred to as the personalized Wall Clocks. These clocks are also pretty much popular among the masses in the sense that they can be personalized individually. If a person wants his name or his photo to be crafted on the clock, then this can be made possible with these personalized wall clocks.
