

Article Side

Understanding the Basics of Personal Injury Cases by Alecia Longsworth

Article published on March 22nd 2012 | Business

Several everyday activities expose people to numerous misfortunes and harm. After all, an accident is an accident—you cannot avoid it. Most individuals try to prevent getting involved in disasters, yet they still wind up in one. In situations such as this, one cannot help but think of who is to blame. Here is where personal injury law enters.

What is personal injury?

A personal injury case is a legal battle that occurs when one suffers from an injury, regardless if it is psychological or physical, that was caused by another individual or party. There are two means a personal injury may be dealt with. First is by means of a formal suit—a litigant submits a complaint against a defendant and settles the case in court. The defendants are not necessarily individuals; they can be companies, businesses, or government agencies that have acted unethically, leading to the injury obtained by the litigant.

The other method to resolve a personal injury case is through informal settlement, where both participants are represented by their attorneys. This settlement is carried out through a negotiation and is followed by a written agreement that both parties consent to abandon any legal action and instead settle the conflict through settlement that is mutually decided upon.

Where to file a complaint

Personal injury suits fall under the legal system of the courts of the state where the injury took place or where the involved parties are located. For example, if a car accident took place in Chicago, the victim can file a personal injury lawsuit in the Supreme Court of Illinois. A Chicago personal injury lawyer can also help a victim, who was hurt by another party from a different state, file the case under the federal trial court.

Receiving compensation

A personal injury attorney Chicago residents recommend can claim two kinds of compensation for their clients: general damages and special damages. The first kind delivers compensation for the victim's pain and loss of future income. It is rewarded to the victim and the amount is decided by the court. The second kind deals with actual monetary loss up to the date of the trial.

Nevertheless, victims of personal injury should keep in mind that filing a suit does not ensure they will win. It is vital that they collaborate with their Chicago personal injury attorney every step of the way to make sure they get the justice and the settlement they ought to get. For more information on personal injury law and cases, check out dmv.org/automotive-law/personal-injury.php.

Article Source:

<http://www.articleside.com/business-articles/understanding-the-basics-of-personal-injury-cases.htm> - Article Side

Alecia Longsworth - About Author:

For more information, please search a Chicago personal injury lawyer, a personal injury attorney Chicago and a Chicago personal injury attorney in Google.

Article Keywords:

chicago personal injury attorney, chicago personal injury lawyer, personal injury attorney chicago

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!