Linen dresses perfect for hot and humid climate. In many eastern countries and in places where the summers are very hot, cotton and linen is staple fabric. Linen is obtained from the fibers of the flax plant. They make very light and fine textile and today even designers incorporate it into their collection for most of the summer collections. For women, nothing can be better than linen dresses for a full day out at work or for a wonderful brunch or lunch session out with friends. Light and breezy, they are ideal for regular wear.

One of the best features of the linen fabric is that it absorbs moisture very fast and dries up equally quick. So even if you sweat it out during the day, the linen dress will soon dry up and make you feel comfortable after sometime under the fan. They can be designed perfectly to make work dresses, with neat lines and formal cuts, so that the day is pleasant and cool. And since it is not at all expensive, you can easily add quite a few pieces if you want to, without burning a hole in the pocket. Nothing can be more soothing to the eye than the soft pastel shades of dyed linen or intricate and delicate embroidery on the dresses. For a day out with friends, they look so cute and utterly feminine.

Linen dresses, if properly taken care of, can last you quite sometime. You have to iron it after every wash, bit nothing can be more pleasing or look more smart than crisp and clean linen. On the other hand, if you do not have enough time on your hands, you can opt for the crease- free linens that are now available. They hardly crease and you wear it straight after a wash. Of course, they are little more expensive, but if you really do not find time for maintenance, then they are a very good option. While washing linen dresses, do not soak them for long is harsh detergents. You can bleach the white ones, but colored linen should always be washed in mild detergents. And it advisable to wash them before they get heavily soiled.

So if you have been thinking about updating your wardrobe for the summer, now is the time to do so. You will love the comfort of the linen dresses and will be soon indulging in more of them.
