Are you tired of looking in the mirror and feeling exasperated with the bald patches on your scalp? You can find many solutions online, but not every option is right for your head.

If you suffer from pattern baldness or hair loss, don't forget to be skeptical of before and after pictures you find on the Internet. When you read the fine print about a product for restoring your hair to reduce the appearance of balding or hair loss, you might find that some patients obtained the desired results but other patients showed little or no hair growth.

There are several laser hair brushes you can explore on the market. Examples include the Viatek laser hair brush and the Neolight laser hair brush. As you brush this product over your scalp, the laser technology is really photo therapy.

The light that shines onto your hair promotes hair growth. Some consumers find that they achieve a fuller head of hair, and they are able to move past the negative self-esteem that results from hair loss. Each laser hair brush product should come with user instructions for how to safely use the product.

What is Scalpmed?

Are you looking for a hair laser treatment you can apply in the privacy of your home? You may not want to go through the embarrassment of visiting a hair loss treatment clinic if it is easier to achieve hair regrowth at home. Scalp Med offers a research-based line of scalp treatment products for both men and women.

The Scalp Med product represents a proprietary formulation developed by the manufacturer. According to Scalp Med, this formulation includes essential amino acids and other agents. The object is to stimulate your hair to regrow in problem areas after you apply the products from Scalp Med.

For women, for example, in April 2010, Scalp Med's trial offer includes three products. Vitadil 2A is the primary regrowth solution that the female patient applies to the scalp. A second product, NutriSol-RF, is a vitamin treatment that complements the primary agent. The trial offer may also include a bonus product like the Cortex Enlarger (hair thickening spray).

The Role of the Dermatologist in Hair Loss

The dermatologist is your new best friend when you want to consult about the best medical treatment for pattern baldness. It is hard in many communities to get your first appointment with a dermatologist; you might also have to afford a higher co-pay through your medical insurance to see this specialist.

When you finally get the chance to sit down and discuss medical options, it pays to have done your homework first. In other words, you should have already considered the available therapies and how each one might suit your home budget. You might also find out if the treatment is covered by your employer's flexible spending account.

The dermatologist may find it appropriate to order diagnostic tests to determine the exact nature of your hair loss. For example, you might be suffering from a pattern of baldness or your hair loss might be temporary, caused by some medication or environmental factor. Your practitioner can also point you to community resources for hair loss.

There might be some hair regrowth clinics or laser treatment providers that are more affordable. You might also want to join a support group to help you cope with the hair loss from your scalp. Whichever way you turn for help, you should assume a dermatologist will make a recommendation in your best interest as a sufferer of hair loss.
