Lights play an important role in all events whether it's a wedding, a birthday party or any other occasion. It changes the way people think and feel in the event. For instance, wedding lighting can enhance the video and pictures during the wedding ceremony; a party lighting can change the mood of the party. In theatres, a spotlight changes the focus of the people on a certain area in the stage. These are only the few roles that lights play in different kinds of events and you need to consider the importance of lighting to make the show great.

Choosing lighting for any events

Knowing the type of event and the set-up of the event will tell you what kind of event lighting you will need. It will tell you the colors of lights, the size of the lights, the location of the lights and even the angle of its placement. Here are the factors that you should consider:

- Type of event : Knowing the type of event is often enough to tell you what kind of lighting you will need. This will be your basis for developing a theme so that you can put up a great show. Party lighting can be as grand as using many lights of different colors and intensity. Wedding lighting on the other hand must be bright enough so that the pictures and videos will look great.
- Location : The location of an event plays a very important role in putting up a great show. It will also tell you what kind of lights you need, the color of the lights and the size of the lights.
- Color : For parties, fashion shows, discos and other casual occasion, the use of different colors can be very handy. Different colors will reflect a different ambiance for the people. It will set what the people think about the event and it will set what they feel. Disco lighting for instance requires different fast moving lights so that you can make people dance to the music. You cannot use bright lights like that in a wedding. People will definitely not dance. On the other hand, you also can not use dim lights as wedding lighting, it will be useless.
- Kind of Lights : Different lights offers different brightness and presents a certain stage in different ways. The type of lights will dictate the brightness of the light, the size of area that will be affected and also the appearance of the videos and pictures that will be taken. This is the reason why the lights used in a wedding are all the same. There are specific lights that should be used on specific locations.

If you don't know anything about lighting and you wanted to put up a great event whether it is for wedding, a birthday party, an anniversary or any other type of event, you probably shouldn't be taking care of this. There is just way too much information that you should know to be able to set-up a good show. You can hire a company that knows what they are doing.
