What is ClearRay Water Purification? by Rohan Sinha

As the saying goes, cleanliness is next to godliness, but for any hot tub owner, the blissful feeling of being submerged in a hot tub is outweighed by the water condition. Nobody wants to feel like they're soaking in chemicals, but impure water is dangerous and unpleasant for anyone trying to relax and soak their stresses away.

The solution to this dilemma of balancing chemical strengths without adding cups of chemicals every day is simpler than it seems: a new water purification system. ClearRay is a perfect system for those looking to kill waterborne bacteria without adding too many chemicals. When you purify your water through this method, your water will not smell strongly chlorinated, and it's easier on your eyes, skin, and hair.

When you buy a ClearRay-equipped hot tub, you're buying the reassurance of knowing a mechanical device has been attached to your hot tub plumbing that will take care of all your purification woes. ClearRay works by generating a UV light that treats water with UV-C rays in order to kill bacteria and viruses in the water and stop them from spreading.

UV-C Light

This type of light is actually quite common in other water purification fields, so it was only a matter of time before it was applied to hot tub water, too! It is used in bottling beverages and purified water, by medical hospitals and pharmaceutical companies when they can't risk adding chemicals to sensitive mixtures, aquariums and fish farms in need of germ-free water, and more.

It disinfects the water without leaving chemicals in the water or other byproducts that can be itchy, strongly-scented, or unsafe. It actually destroys the DNA of bacteria and viruses so they cannot reproduce, and it does not generate ozone. This is a natural way of cleaning your hot tub water.

Ease of Use

This water purification device requires far less time and effort than most traditional water maintenance and chemical balancing. If you have to test your water every day and add chemicals frequently, you will need to check them before you use the tub every time, and this gets frustrating quickly. Other purification systems require you to install them yourself, which is still more hassle.

ClearRay is a factory-installed purifier that works directly through the plumbing. You don't need to add extra chemicals, and you simply follow the instruction guide to care for your water and maintain the hot tub. Better yet, it doesn't do long-term damage to the internal workings of the hot tub like most chemical maintenance products.
