Drunk drivers are a risk to other vehicles and pedestrians on the road. If you or a loved one happens to be injured in a drunk driving case, you need to first obtain medical help and then look for able legal assistance to help you claim damages. A drunk driving accident lawyer can help you gather evidence, represent your case in the court of law and help you recover damages by means of compensation. In addition, such attorneys are also well-versed with the intricacies of the insurance claim process.

Every now and then, there are DUI cases reported in the different boroughs of Pennsylvania. Luckily, with the presence of some reputable Pennsylvania personal injury lawyers, there is hope for professional legal representation.

Following are the main counts on which victims, survivors or next of kin can recover damages from the negligent or faulty party:

Medical bills

Pain and suffering

Monetary damages (such as damage to the vehicle)

Lost wages or loss of ability to earn wages

Wrongful death

Punitive damages

What you should know about the Dram Shop Liability:

There are different DUI rules that govern different states in the USA. In Pennsylvania, it is the Dram Shop Liability. This legal doctrine rules that that intoxicated driver isn't always the sole person responsible for a DUI accident case. The business or individual who served alcohol to a visibly intoxicated person can also be held equally responsible. This further protects the rights of a DUI victim. This Liability also applies when alcohol is served to a person under the age of 18 years. Besides, it also applies when one serves alcohol after the legal time of closure of an establishment or serves alcohol without holding a valid license. A drunk driving accident lawyer will be able to explain to you all the intricacies of such specific laws and more.

Once you have found a capable lawyer who can represent you throughout Montgomery County and Bucks County, he or she will guide you about the kind of evidence you need to gather. A Pennsylvania personal injury lawyers firm often has on board a DUI lawyer that they can assign to you. Simultaneously dealing with hospitals, insurance companies and the court can be a rather harrowing task. Hence, finding a compassionate lawyer can ease your worries to a great extent.

By hiring a reputable lawyer, you stand every chance to get the compensation you deserve. It is prudent to choose a lawyer that is familiar with the medical and insurance industry. So, you can focus on recovering while your drunk driving accident lawyer helps you handle your claims.
