Loans are made for the monetary convenience that one has been longing for. Approval of various loans require various prerequisites. The lenders provide loans on myriad conditions which if not met then the loan sanction falls in the danger of being denied.

One of the major preconditions is that one needs to pledge collateral to avail of a certain type of loan. The interest rate may vary according to the amount forwarded by the lender. Also, the time period depends upon that very amount. Usually the time period for such loans can range from six months to ten years. But this can be, accordingly, extended if the borrower is unable to make the necessary payments on time.
