

Article published on June 11th 2012 | Shopping

Anyone who has ever bought a perfume from a shop has been exposed to a tester. A tester refers to that open bottle of perfume that the salesperson uses to spritz your arm to show you what a fragrance smells like.

Basically a tester is the same fragrance that you buy from a shop, without the fancy packaging necessary for retail. The testers come in the same bottles and carry the same amount of perfume and have the same quality as the packaged fragrance.

Perfumerika.com offers a wide range of testers which are available directly from the manufacturer and have never been used before. Some people when purchasing perfumes for themselves choose to buy tester bottles as they are much less expensive.

What You Might Hear About Purchasing Testers

Since testers are meant for commercial retail, many people believe that they are somehow inferior to the packaged fragrances that are generally sold in stores. Here are some common myths that people believe about testers and why they are untrue.

Myth 1: Testers Have Lesser Fragrance in the Same Bottles

This is untrue because since stores need testers to last long, and they are tried on by many customers they need to be according to the specifications of the containers they come in. Testers come in both 50 ML and 100 ML.

Myth 2: Testers are Different from the Real Fragrance

Testers are the same as the "real"™ fragrance because testers are used to give customers an idea of what the actual packaged fragrance would be like. If testers would be of inferior quality or if they did not smell the same as the packaged perfume then no customer would buy the actual product.

Myth 3: Testers Come Without Sprayers So They Are Prone To Leakage

While it is true that some testers don't have caps, all of them do have sprayers; therefore there is no chance of leakage. The only way a tester can leak is if it is carelessly handled, the same way the packaged perfume can break or leak if the bottle is tampered with.

Myth 4: Buying Testers is Illegal because they are labeled "Not For Resale"

It is always smart to read the labels clearly. Most testers are labeled "Not for Resale" not, "Not for Sale". This means that you can buy them legally without the intent of selling them. Perfumerika.com sells a whole range of testers, from boxed, to capped to uncapped and unboxed. However all of them are full, completely unused and are completely genuine

Since they come directly from the manufacturer, Perfumerika.com guarantees your satisfaction with the tester you purchase, which is just a less expensive way of owning the fragrance you have been coveting.

Article Source:

<http://www.articleside.com/shopping-articles/what-is-tester.htm> - Article Side

Ucsaajeetsh - About Author:

a Perfumerika offers west collection of perfume and colognes for both men and women. Our collection of Original perfumes, discount perfume stores online for men and women, cologne outlet, cologne and fragrances shop, women fragrances perfumes, skin care products at extremely low prices.

For more details visit: a <http://www.perfumerika.com>

Article Keywords:

Perfume, fragrances, testers, retail, colognes, online perfume, low cost, perfume testers, Discount fragrant stores, Perfumes and fragrances, Women fragrances, Fragrances for men, Discount perfume stores, Colognes for men, Fragrance outlet, Perfumes for w

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!