Are you wondering about where to get started with your Indian expedition? New Delhi is the perfect place to begin your trip to incredible India. The city is naturally blessed with a potential to startle any traveler that treads its earth. Be it religion, people, food, weather or culture, you are bound to be dumbfounded with the exquisite variety it presents. This beautiful city brims with regal forts, majestic palaces, beautiful mosques, holy temples, inspirational monuments and blossoming landscaped gardens. Here are seven tips that you should keep in mind while planning a trip to this hot destination.

Tips for Delhi Tourists

The climate at Delhi is unpredictable with extreme fluctuations. Normally, the summers are too hot and winters too cold. The time span between September and November as well February and April is considered to be the best time for outdoor exploration. If you are travelling in harsh weather, fill your bags with climate appropriate clothing or opt to buy a few from the city markets. If you want to explore every nook and corner of the city, be sure that it will take you a lifetime. It therefore is no surprise that an air ticket to New Delhi will cost you a bomb. Always book multi leg flights with transits at Middle East /European airports. This can significantly reduce the cost of your travel than choosing direct flights to the city. You can also get cheaper business class tickets to Delhi as it is India's commercial capital as well. Once you enter the metropolitan, you can hire auto rickshaws and cabs for local commuting. If you feel more adventurous, venture out on low-floor buses, metro trains and bicycles to get a glimpse of the place. Be careful of what you eat and drink in India to avoid food poisoning and related gastric trouble.

Tours in Delhi

The Red fort set completely in red sandstone is a good example of the Mughal architecture that once prevailed and is worth every second of your trip. Jama Masjid- the largest mosque of India neighbors the Red Fort and towers over chaotic streets of Old Delhi. Qutab Minar is an implausible illustration of superb Indo-Islamic architecture. This brick minaret is the tallest in the world and helixes up to an incredible height of seventy two meters. The premises hold ancient ruins and many beautiful structures to its credit. Just like the Taj Mahal at Agra, the Humayun's tomb at Delhi is set amidst verdant lawns and warrants attention. Other attractions include the Rajpath, Lotus Temple, President House, India Gate, Old Fort and Akshardham Temple.
