Article published on June 22nd 2012 | Travel

Elephant and Castle resides in the London Borough of Southwark. It consists of a major road intersection which can, at times, become quite congested. Situated in the vicinity of the intersection is Elephant and Castle station and on the eastern side, Elephant and Castle Shopping Centre. The station has underground and overground services, connecting you to most of Greater London and the surrounding areas. Although your initial impressions of the surroundings may be a little low, with many of the buildings looking a tad run down, the area still offers a lot. If you are in the vicinity and are looking to explore via a Elephant and Castle taxi in SE1, then there is plenty to see. The Coronet Theatre, situated on the New Kent Road, is a large live music venue. This historic building has stood the test of time, providing entertainment for the masses for over 100 years. The art deco interior still remains today, despite its existence during The Blitz and its use as a shelter. In the early era of the venue, a cinema provided entertainment to the masses with performances and screenings of some of the best loved films.

Today, the venue stands as a nightclub and live music venue, providing high quality events. For those that love good music and want the opportunity to see it live, then this is the venue for you. The Coronet Theatre is one of the biggest live music clubs in the capital and the area is synonymous for it. Their diverse calendar of events and convenient location makes this a viable and attractive location for a night out. Taxis in Elephant and Castle are great for getting to and from the venue, especially for late night journeys home in the small hours.

However, if you are looking for attractions to visit in the daytime then there are a number for you to choose from. Take a short ride in an Elephant and Castle cab to Southwark. Situated just to the north of Elephant, you will come across the well known Borough Market. Stroll through the rows and rows of stalls where you can buy a variety of foods and produce sourced from Britain and International shores. Taste the produce first hand whilst you wander through the stalls and if that wets your appetite then why not recline in one of the many restaurants that are located in the markets vicinity? A morning spent browsing the market before eating a delicious lunch doesn't get more relaxing.
