Drawing Profits from Your Very Own Website Design by Fellicia Smith

Article published on December 8th 2011 | Web Design

But sometimes there are certain essential factors which are often underestimated which results in poor trafficking and avoidable of visitors at a site. Before, creating a website design it is advisable to look for a web company that understands well and the nature of your business as well as your targeted customers. Web design in Atlanta will aid you with such problems but before this it is important to understand the flaws which could force the users to leave your site immediately. Certain tips have been drafted in order to give you a clear concept in creating a profitable site.

User-Friendly Navigation:

It is often seen that when a user tries to get into a website, it becomes difficult for him to move further, the reason behind this is inappropriate guiding technology or the problem in navigation direction. At the end it becomes too hectic and time-killing that the diner is forced to leave the website immediately. This results in the decline of audiences and ultimately the website stays on the net unattended. This is crucial for which it must be given prior importance than all. Make sure that the website designer constructs the website keeping the navigation menu clear and easily accessible.

Dial-up clients are least interested in graphics:

Images or pictures are meant to entice visitors to create thick crowd at a particular website but this could be a time taking for dial-up internet users. A website should be created not only for general audiences but also for those dial-up clients. A website that is stuffed with immense graphics often tends to maximize the download time. To avoid such situations the website needs to be optimized by using image editing program which will minimize the files and hence it becomes easier for the dial-up clients to operate thus minimizing the download time.

Avoid unnecessary and lengthy text content:

Lengthy text contents especially those which are not proportionate to the nature of the business or the images would often turn away the visitors. It is always tiring reading lengthy content until if you are not a serious shopper looking for your requirements. Adding to this, if the text contents are irrelevant to the images or vice versa the user might become skeptic about the changes forcing him to turn down the website.

Cross Browsing Compatibility:

One last correction to your website is that sometimes the site fails to open in different browsers. Today, two most reliable browsers are used "Internet Explorer" and "Firefox" but they are not the only one. "Google Chrome", 'Opera"Netscape Navigator" and many more are also used but are limited. People around the world would prefer other browsers over "Internet Explorer" and "Firefox" and if your website fails to respond in that particular browser then the chances to lose your customers increases. It is therefore, the W3C validator helps to improve the compatibility of a website on various browsers.

The above tips and correction may be little but they are effective to begin a business through a proper website design.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/web-design-articles/drawing-profits-from-your-very-own-website-design.htm - Article Side

Fellicia Smith - About Author:

Fellicia Smith working for http://www.alvicreatives.com/ has written the above article which explains about the correction and giving out necessary tips about a a Website development In Atlanta that how it must be capable to draw visitors on a particular website.

Article Keywords:
web design in atlanta, website development in atlanta

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!