Article Side
Web Glossary: Your One Stop Site for Internet Words by Shaly Criston

Article published on February 7th 2012 | Web Hosting

In this modern world we are living in, computers have been our helping hand for us to achieve all the feats we have in life. It makes our lives easier with just a simple click. We can now, buy and sell online, work, and be acquainted with families and friend across the world.

In fact, almost all the things that we do nowadays need aid from a computer. When the internet has started to speed up, almost all people in the world became connected. For this reason, learning to use the computer and knowing how to surf the internet are inevitable. No one will be able to survive the cyber era without any know how in computer and internet operation.

Importance of Learning It

Although most of us are exerting efforts just to study the information technology so that we will not feel and look dumb, it should not stop with the syntax and the procedural. Aside from learning the jargons of computer, knowing also the web lingo is very important so that we can understand those people we transact online.

For example, you are chatting with your friend and she told you that she is making a podcast on the internet. Not familiar with the world, you are unable to reply for a long moment. Being in this situation is very shameful because if you ask your friend she might think you are so ignorant about the internet. You may try to use the search engine to look for the meaning of this word. However, you cannot do this every time you encounter an unfamiliar word.

How to Find and For Whom

To save all the trouble in searching for those words, a web glossary or internet dictionary is already available online. It is either a website or a blog which contains common terms people used in computing and surfing the internet. Very similar with a regular dictionary, all the words are listed alphabetically for ease of finding.

In the case of the word â€œpodcastâ€•, you just go to letter P and immediately you can spot its meaning. For those who are not familiar with the term, it is a regular blog in a form of sounds and/or videos. This is very helpful for all types of people especially for homemakers who do not encounter most of these terms in their daily activities.

Learning the web lingo is not only for those who are working but also for non-working moms. They can use this to understand more the activities of their children when surfing the net or when they want to engage in internet business so that they can earn money at home. Albeit studying these words are highly recommended for homemakers, it is not necessary that working people should not. Knowing these web jargonsâ€™s can also give you the upper hand at work. Example, your boss is asking about the URL of a website. You can impress him because you know that he meant the site address with an http:// or www.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/web-hosting-articles/web-glossary-your-one-stop-site-for-internet-words.htm - Article Side

Shaly Criston - About Author:
If you need help about familiarizing every a web lingo on the internet, you can visit topwahms.com. It is a web glossary made especially for those who want to know the common internet terms used online.

Article Keywords:
Web Lingo, Web Glossary

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!